A Thundering Wind

Placing words onto a blank page is an agonizingly lonely process that can only be accomplished by the author, but it is never done in a vacuum. There is always inspiration which comes from many sources: one's surroundings, friends, family, personal experiences, spiritual beliefs, study, research, and history. As this is a work of fiction based upon historical events, people, and places, it has been my privilege to learn about extraordinary men and women, who, if they could speak for themselves, A Thundering Wind would modestly say, "I was only doing my job," "It's just a living," "I'm no one special," and "It's a gift from God." History gives us a better perspective in which to marvel at those who bravely came before us.

I may be responsible for the order of the words, but without the unwavering support and encouragement from my family and friends, this novel would not have been conceived, let alone finished. From the bottom of my heart to the A Thundering Wind tip of my pen-indented fingers, I want to acknowledge and thank each of you who spent mind-numbing hours online, or who scoured dusty bookshelves for the research that was required to accurately fill these A Thundering Wind pages. Your efforts were invaluable as I delved into a fascinating way of life that has passed into history.

With Extra Special Thanks to:

JoAnne Watson—Your many times unselfish and thankless job as A Thundering Wind gofer, typist, editor, and copy person, taking care of items that needed to be done, did not go unnoticed. I dearly cherish you.

Bill Einsig—Your willingness and courage to read an early draft, and then to gently suggest ways to improve the story was both insightful and appreciated.

Jane Currier, Currier House Bed and Breakfast—Your wonderful hospitality and sharing your rich heritage, specifically in regards to James A. Currier, was fascinating.

Ellsworth and Madelyn Shank—As kinsmen to Madison Mitchell, your memories of the world-class carver and the lives of wildfowl hunters has truly been a treasure.

Linda Wills—Your contribution of documentation of many of the historical figures: Bessie Coleman, Harriet Quinby, and Sir Ernest A Thundering Wind Shackleton to name a A Thundering Wind few, immeasurably helped to ensure authenticity. I am happily indebted for your generosity and always willing spirit.

Doug Real—Your artwork for the cover brings in vibrant detail which is the carver/hunter's craft. In this case, I hope the book is judged by the cover.

Marilyn Posluszny—Your lifelike sketches for the interior of the book will certainly hold the reader to the marsh where each can delight A Thundering Wind in the wildfowl at rest or on the wing.

Paula Dana—Your mastery of the computer and ability to decipher my chicken scratch so as to turn my vision into reality has been a godsend.

Judy Miller—You are a wordsmith extraordinaire. I deeply appreciate your time and skills in reviewing the book.

My gratitude for each of your contributions is without end.
