Another Look at Physics

INTRODUCTION

Physics is supposed to be a science. However Physics is riddled with so many inconsistencies that it appears more of a religion than science. Classical Mechanics does not agree with Relativity. Relativity fails in the subatomic level. Quantum Mechanics, despite of providing an understanding of the behaviour of light, is built on principles that most likely cannot be proven.

I think however that the disagreement in the different fields of Physics is not due to inherent errors in their formulations but rather due to vague explanation of their bases. Failure to realize the true basis of each field Another Look at Physics results in apparent inconsistencies.

It is therefore appropriate to take a closer look at these bases, understand them, and provide more alternative approaches if necessary, in order to arrive at unification.
