Insurrection

A Galactic Empire Wars Novel

Chapter One

Supreme Military Overlord Harmock gazed at the large viewscreen in front of him, which showed the burning remains of a Hytalian battlecruiser. Harmock was a member of the Zaltule clan of the Kleese race. He was the leader of a warrior caste that had Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) been bred to engage in war and expand the Kleese Empire across the galaxy. When their last great Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) enemy had been defeated, the Zaltule had been placed in deep sleep. For thousands of years, they had slept only to be awakened when it had been discovered their long sleep was becoming dangerous. The Zaltule were dying in the sleep chambers, so Supreme Overlord Xatul had made the decision to awaken them before the warrior caste was lost.

The Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Kleese resembled giant arachnids but had a large hair covered upper body that rose up into the air with a large triangular shaped head and strange looking multifaceted eyes. Two nearly black arms extended from the upper chest ending in what looked to be hands with seven long, thin digits. The Kleese were large with bodies and six legs reaching nearly eight feet in width and six feet in height.

“Hytalian flagship has been destroyed,” confirmed Minor Overlord Gareth, Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Harmock’s second in command. “Their remaining fleet Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) is retreating toward their world.”

The Kleese, for the most part, were devoid of most human emotions such as empathy, love, or pity. Instead, they focused on serving their clan and the Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Kleese Empire and the colder more harsh Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) emotions that allowed them to rule with contempt all of the lower races of their empire.

“One hundred and eighteen battlecruisers still remain as well as the defense grid above the planet,” reported Jalridd from his sensor console.

Harmock stamped his feet upon the Command Pedestal as he considered his fleet's next move. He had twelve hundred updated Zaltule battlecruisers. The ships were over three kilometers across and one thousand meters Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) thick. Their Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) hulls were covered in weapons emplacements with pulse fusion batteries and energy turrets in abundance. Hundreds of small hatches hid sublight antimatter missiles ready to be launched at a moment's notice. Unlike Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) the larger Kleese exploration ships, the battlecruisers were designed for war, and there were no large training facilities for conscripts or holding areas inside the ships. The ships were filled with power systems and narrow corridors that would make it nearly impossible for a conscript in a Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) battlesuit to traverse. These ships were designed for fleet battles and planetary bombardment. They were capable of traveling Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) at one hundred twenty light-years per day in Fold Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Space.

“Move us in toward the planet,” ordered Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Harmock. “Contact the Hytalian ruling council and explain to them that if they agree to surrender, we will spare their world. They must swear allegiance to the Kleese Empire and wear the collars of obedience. If they refuse our demands, we will bombard their planet with antimatter missiles.”

“I will have the message sent,” replied Gareth, fully in agreement with the Military Overlord's pronouncement. The Kleese were the dominant species in the galaxy and all others were subservient. The remainder existed only to serve the Kleese race.

Harmock watched from the Command Pedestal as his fleet moved toward the Hytalian's home planet. The Hytalian's were a very advanced race, and Harmock was determined to see to it they didn't join the Human led Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Alliance that had become so troublesome. The Humans had even attacked the Kleese home system, destroying a Zaltule shipyard, heavily damaging another, and demolishing the Zaltule deep sleep chambers on the icy moon where four Queens had remained in suspension. The Queens had died in their sleep. This was the first time in the recorded history of the Kleese that a Queen had been killed by another species. Not only that, a Human battlecruiser had managed to attack and destroy the heart of the Kleese Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) capital city, killing over six million. Never in the long history of the Kleese Empire had another race dared such sacrilege.

For over a year Harmock had been forced to halt his war of expansion against the nonaligned worlds. He had consolidated his forces and ensured Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) the other Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection

(The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) Kleese worlds were well protected from future attacks. Former Supreme Overlord Xatul had also vanished with a major portion of the Kleese exploration fleet as well as two of the valuable Kleese trading stations. A search had been made but as of yet there had been no indication of where Xatul had fled. When he was found, Harmock intended to use the Zaltule warfleet to eliminate the former Supreme Overlord as it had been deemed he was unfit Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) to rule the Kleese Empire. The Zaltule were now in charge, and all who Galactic Empire Wars: Insurrection (The Galactic Empire Wars Book 5) refused to submit were being quickly eliminated.

“The Hytalianians are refusing to surrender,” Minor Overlord Gareth reported in a harsh voice, his eyes focusing on the Supreme Military Leader. “They dare to defy us!”

“Perhaps they hope an Alliance fleet will arrive in time to save them,” spoke Salten, the weapons officer.
