FOR GEORGE AND ANNIE

The Prophecy

A Brenin boy you'll need to find

Born at Samhain of Humankind.

The One you seek is brave and strong

And his true heart will do no wrong.

The Golden Acorn he will see

And listen to the Dryad's plea.

Underneath Glasruhen hill

He'll make a promise Glasruhen Gate: Book 2 (The Adventures of Jack Brenin) he'll fulfil.

When Glasruhen Gate: Book 2 (The Adventures of Jack Brenin) all is equal, all the same

That which was lost is found again.

PROLOGUE

'We're back,' croaked Camelin as he flew over the tall hedge that surrounded Ewell House.

Jack wasn't far behind. He could see Motley and the Night Guard scurrying towards the kitchen door as he too flew over the hedge. Gerda hurried onto the patio and two small bats flitted around the doorway.

'We're back, we did it!' Camelin announced to everyone who'd come to welcome them.

'Where's Orin?' Jack shouted to Motley as he made his descent.

'Up here!' an excited, squeaky voice replied from the open window of Camelin's loft.

Jack saw Camelin land on the grass and proudly strut towards the waiting group. Seconds later, he too had landed. Orin appeared Glasruhen Gate: Book 2 (The Adventures of Jack Brenin) at the kitchen door and rushed over to them. Timmery and Charkle fluttered around their heads. Everyone was asking questions at once. Camelin flew onto the picnic table and swaggered up and down, and then he threw back his head and loudly made the call of the raven-owl. Everything went quiet as they waited for him to speak. He puffed out his chest feathers, cocked his head to one side and slowly looked at each face. Jack could see the rats were desperate to hear what Camelin had to say.
