How Love Is...

Sonnets and More

to my Loves, pour vous d'un mille fois

Two flowers bloom their inner pods' exchange,
Many How Love Is o'seasons pass and turn their leaves,
Yet as Atlas shifts his gaze which How Love Is won't change
Friends remain friends if will they so believe,
Though gone from warmth in Winters far from Sun
So some long will travel without a talk
Because of longing past wrongings we've done
And far from Hope ever alone they walk,
Wishing a comfort How Love Is that which once they knew,
Restores the voice their minds' belief refused,
Which sprung before in gentle kindness grew,
And bonds still grow despite the years unused,

So turns this placid Orb around we stretch,

No height from which we fall a friend shalln't catch.

After anew from wintered sleeps arise
Those slumb'ring buds which yet await to spring,
If to remind how to forget sufficed,
No rest or hide may tension recurring
What in Life discovers or dreams awake
Wherein you may in times distressed mistake
What falls from a tree that How Love Is rev'ries do shake
And so reminds what from distractions take
In Safety's keep align Misfortune's grasp Fromwhere so a dreamer onward ventured
Like a gardner's scars must his will outlast;
If not, a slave, you shall be indentured.
Be not ignored by what you have suppressed
For in due Time's regard will you harvest.

Often I've compared to a Summer's day,

    Upon a Rose's mist of thistle dew,
    Its cling to the breadth of sweet Morning May,
    Though as crisp drops of Heaven's petals' hue,
    Far along with me they have been a drink
On trails, the leaves, ripe and fresh, in How Love Is the Spring;
    For thee my belle down to Love will I sink,
    Anew like dew in Morn' toge'er we'll cling
    Like to trails by which no traveler has trekked
And that which trails behind, our past-life's read,
    To you do I pledge perfect not I'm crook'd,
    Yet from my heart such melodies do bleed,
    And in the great flood will you find refuge,
So your life with me whom by you shall choose.

    With clay do Sculpters' hands replicate
    What in Life an image foremost appears,
    Into stone any minds manipulate
    The intent an Artist's heart uprears,
Which many times do those eyes revisit,
    Though a pebble do most prejudicate;
    To make a gem so their souls deposit,

Into sculpture his hands extravagate,

Yet by friends and Misfortunes despise,

Down to dust do statues fall depredate

By deafened, blind'd, and mistook outcries
