I was at my station early in the morning and the rush of people hadn't started yet. It allowed me time to search a shoe website. Of course I've already bought a new pair of shoes and haven't worn them. The last thing I needed was more shoes although I can't stop buying them.

There goes Jeanie hacking like there's no tomorrow. She scares customers away with that nasty cough of hers, and they come to me. I wish I didn't have her share of customers and mine.

I've had my own share of troubles lately. A customer complained to my supervisor about not checking him in fast enough. A pushy, impatient man who always has his panties in a bunch screamed through the airport, demanding I help him right away.

He was Jeanie's customer originally. He came to my line after she got chocked and left her post. I told him talk to the owners for hiring incompetent workers, and to direct anymore concerns to Fly Airlines.

My supervisor overheard the conversation and let me slide with a warning. Every year I have a meltdown around this time. I'm still looking for that special man, and I let Valentine's Day get me down. It's a shame and I know it.

“Good morning mam, I’m checking in.” The flood gates had opened. “You’re good to go. Enjoy your trip, and have a nice day sir.”

Customers were rolling along and everyone was headed to one destination or another. Heck, I started dreaming about floating on LOVE AT LAST someone’s island. It definitely was a dream because I didn’t have any money, or a man to take me. I can’t stop throwing money at shoes, or yelling at men to go on a vacation. My life was one big mess but hey it LOVE AT LAST could’ve been worse.

“It’s good to see you this morning.” I love checking my dream man in. His cologne made me want to sniff him like a bloodhound. Don’t mention his LOVE AT LAST charm. Every word this guy uttered made me giggle like a school girl. I’m not exaggerating either. He travels extensively, and I’ve made his reservation for some while. The ring on his finger has kept me right in my place of just being his reservation agent.

“Hi Mike, it’s good to see you too. LOVE AT LAST One moment and you’ll be good to go.” I said in my girly voice. With every step he took to check LOVE AT LAST in his luggage my eyes fell further out of my head. His wife was one lucky woman.
