Acknowledgements

I would like to thank my wife Anne for putting up with me while I was working on white papers, presentations and, of course, books like this one. I'd also like to thank my colleagues at the Kusnetzky Group; Virtualization Review; ZDnet; and information technology executives and decision-makers who took time out of their busy schedules to answer my questions about their use of technology and how they selected products and Making the IT Decision - California Department of Water Resources services.

Preface

Both virtualization and cloud computing are complex subjects. Hundreds of information technology suppliers are offering products and services hoping to help their customers be more efficient, reduce their overall costs of computing and make their lives better.

Since there are so many suppliers and products, it is hard for information technology executives and decision-makers to evaluate products and services. So, Kusnetzky Group developed a simple profile questionnaire that Making the IT Decision - California Department of Water Resources would allow them to quickly help us understand their thoughts and preferences. The author hopes this information will simplify the process and make product decisions easier.

This book is one of a number of titles in this series.

This book presents an interview with California Department of Water Resources. This Making the IT Decision - California Department of Water Resources Interview was conducted in April 2016.
