Trey

“I don’t care about your man. If you don’t mention him, I’ll never know anything about him. It’s you that I want.”

“My conscious is getting the best of me.” She whispered. “I’m not Masking Transgressions sure if I can continue to give in to my feelings for you. I owe him something. I’m just not sure what that is.”

“I’m Masking Transgressions not gonna pressure you. Follow your heart. The only thing I’m going to tell you is I need you in my life. But if you feel like you owe him something. I’ll give you time to figure out just what it is you owe him.”

“I want you. I’m just confused.”

She buried her face in her hands. Stood at the door in confusion as I sat on the edge of the bed. Watched her try to mask her transgressions. My heart went Masking Transgressions out to her.

“Come here.” I reached out to hold her.

After a moment of reluctance, she slowly strolled over to me and rested her plumpness at my crotch. My arms immediately surrounded her slim waist. Drew her in closer. Wanted to feel her soft body next to mine. Took in Masking Transgressions her heavenly scent.

Everything about her was angelic. Skin so smooth, so beautiful, classy, all woman. The way she carried herself could not be duplicated. She was one of a kind.

She was my woman of distinction and my heart was open for Masking Transgressions her. I loved her more than any woman I’d ever come to know before. I knew I’d fallen too hard. I couldn’t help what I felt. Knew I was self-destructing.

She turned to look into my eyes. Gave me a soft kiss on the tip of my nose. I smiled. Looked into her eyes. Saw uncertainty with a big heart.

If she weren’t so pretty, maybe I wouldn’t want to look at her so much. If she weren’t so sweet maybe my heart wouldn’t melt in her presence. If she weren’t so sexy, maybe my little friend would stop causing me problems. If I didn’t love her so much, maybe I could walk away.

“Do you love him?”

I didn’t want to ask. Said I didn’t care about him. But for some reason I felt the need to know.

She tore her eyes away from me. Watched her beautiful toes dance. Offered no answer. Don’t think she really knew how.

Thought I’d go for an easier question. “Do you love me?”

She moved her gray eyes back onto my face. Gave me the sweet smile that her face wore so well. Soft hands at my cheeks. Soft kiss on my lips.

It was becoming evident. The heart that I held so close to mine belonged to another man.
Masking Transgressions

I knew she was married when I first met her. The two sparkling carats told the tale. But her personality, her intelligence, and her beauty drew me in.

She wasn't a flirt. She wasn't a tease. She wasn't a freak. She wasn't looking for me.

She was a lady. A grown woman in every sense of the word. A woman who deserved the world. A woman who was too good for the best.

We complimented one another with conversation and a familiar Southern upbringing. We shared. We compared. We looked into each other's Masking Transgressions hearts and found what had been missing in our lives. I found the love I'd always wanted. The person to share Masking Transgressions my life Masking Transgressions with. To bless everyday with. I found that person in her.

I treasured her mind, her style, and her everlasting persona. From the top of her head, to the soles of her feet, inside and out. She was what I needed. All that I desired. I didn't care what a piece of paper said. I loved her with all my heart. And that was all that mattered.

How do you turn away from what you've waited for all of your life? What you've needed for so long?

This situation I've found is wearing at me.
