Chapter 1

Jason flung the open book down on the counter in front of him when the door of the small library opened and couldn't control the flush of warmth that began on his neck then spread up to his cheeks. That a librarian should be reading wasn't something My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance to hide, but he didn't want anyone to know the type of material he got his enjoyment from. He knew it was silly to get flustered and that the romance novel he threw down wasn't exactly risqué, but he still didn't want anyone to My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance catch him perusing it. As he got to My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance his feet, he dropped the handkerchief he was holding on top of the book to My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance conceal the cover and it was only then that he looked to see who came in.

"Good evening Mrs. Washington," he said politely in a soft voice. "Is there anything I can help you with today?"

"No dear," the older woman replied. "I'm just My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance planning to look at the new titles that have come in this week.”

“Well, you know where I set them out,” Jason went on. “So take as long as you need.”

That a customer came in so late in the day was somewhat of a surprise to him. It didn't happen very often and most evenings he spent the last hour or so in the library on his own. His usual routine was to make sure the tables and chairs were clean and tidy then return any books lying around to their proper position on the shelves. His excellent mind for organization was the perfect attribute for a librarian and was partly what led him in to the profession, with his love of reading also taking him in that direction when he left school and needed to get serious about a career.

It was almost an obsession with him to have everything neat before he left work each evening to make sure the library was ready for opening the following morning. On the occasions when he finished this work early enough he would do some reading of his own, which was what he was doing when Mrs. Washington came in. He waited until the older woman was browsing the selection of new books that just came in at the start of the week before picking up his handkerchief to retrieve the romance novel he'd been My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance reading and put it in his bag.

He wanted to find out how the story between the hero and roguish hero ended and could do that in the comfort of his own home that evening, without the worry of being disturbed. It would set his imagination free that he was the one My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance being swept off his feet, which was as close as he got to it actually happening. In real life he was still single at 28 and feared that he was heading towards an end as one of the perpetual My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance bachelors of Kingston. He wasn't there My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance yet, but his romantic prospects were limited by the lack of older single men in the community. It was even more restricted by his shyness and timidity around people in general and particularly attractive guys.

That he was still a naïve virgin at his age wasn't My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance something that really sat well with him and he wished his life could be more like the heroes in the romance novels he loved to read. The pages of a book weren't like real life, however, and being swept off his feet by a hero wasn't something he was really expecting to happen.

He glanced at the clock on the wall to see it was now six o'clock. That was officially when the library closed for the day, but it wasn't something he adhered to if there was someone browsing My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance the shelves. He was usually content to wait until the person finished their business in the library and just lock up afterwards. On this evening, however, he was more concerned about leaving late because My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance it was one of those on which he volunteered at his local church and it wasn't just any night. It was Pastor Samuel's last evening in the place.

Jason was sad to see him go, since My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance he was one of the few men that he found himself able to talk My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance to. He was sixty-five years old and he'd known his retirement was coming for a few months, but it was still a change that he wasn't looking forward to. He'd become accustomed to having him there when he did his volunteer work in the church office and his community of helpers were now friends that stopped him being as lonely as he otherwise might have been.

Pastor Samuel was leaving the following day to return to his home town and he wondered just how that My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance would alter things at the church. The gossip around the place in the last few weeks was all about who his replacement would be, but even he didn't appear to know the man that would be taking over as pastor of Kingston.

Jason found himself worrying that whoever did take over might have his own ideas about how the church should be My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance run and that he may not need someone in the office at all. It seemed unlikely, but he'd only ever served under Pastor Samuel so was unaware of how others worked. In the end he knew there was no way of knowing what would happen until the new man actually arrived and he wanted to get to the church to find out if there was any news.

He glanced across the library to where the new titles were set out. Mrs. Washington was in no My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance hurry to finish what she was doing by the looks of it and Jason could only watch as the elderly woman picked up books to read the back cover then put them back on My Gay Pastor: BMW African American Interracial Romance the shelf. There was no holding down his slight frustration as the minutes ticked by, but he stopped it from showing and just tried his best to wait patiently.

It was around fifteen minutes or so before Mrs. Washington finally came to a decision and walked across to the counter carrying a book. Jason took it from her to make a note of who was borrowing it then stamped a return date on the small form taped inside the front cover. He worked quickly to get the last job of the day completed.

"I hope you enjoy it," he said when he handed it back.

"I'm sorry to have kept you late dear," Mrs. Washington apologized. "Is that you off home now?"

"Not tonight," Jason replied. "This is one of my evenings for volunteering at the church."

"Isn't this Pastor Samuel's last day?" Mrs. Washington asked.

"Yes," Jason replied. "He leaves tomorrow."

"It will be sad to see him go," the older woman went on. "He's done a lot of good in the community during his years at the church. He's been one of the best pastors we've had in this area."

"Yes, he'll be missed," Jason agreed.

"Do you know who will be replacing him?" Mrs. Washington asked.

"There's no news on that yet as far as I know," Jason informed her.

---

Mrs. Washington nodded her head and remained silent as if she was deep in thought before she eventually spoke again.

“Well I better not keep you any longer,” she said. “Goodnight.”

“Goodnight,” Jason replied.

He moved out from behind the counter before Mrs. Washington left the building and looked at the slightly untidy state of the new titles. The compulsion rose to go and sort them out, but he resisted it to walk across to the storage closet. Taking a key from his pocket, he unlocked the door and opened it to get his coat. He put it on then returned to the counter to get his bag. The last thing he needed to do was switch off the lights and he went to do that then left the building. He used the keys he was still holding to lock the door and checked to make sure it was secure before setting off into the growing darkness of early My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance evening. The church My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance wasn't My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance too far from the library where he worked, but it was still well after six thirty when he hurried through the doors.

“Well, well...,” Glenda Orbin let out in a loud enough voice to make sure the people around her heard. “It's nice of you to make the effort to turn up on time.”

Jason couldn't stop the flush of warmth erupting on his face. One of the things he hated most in life was being the center of attention, but that was exactly what he was at that very moment My Gay Pastor: BMWM African American Interracial Romance as all eyes turned to him. Considering he was in a house of God, he resisted the urge to curse under his breath although it was what he wanted to do.
