One

He watched the little boy playing across the street. Had watched from his apartment for weeks and sometimes he'd fantasize while watching him ride around on his tricycle. He'd thought about snatching the kid a few times, but Tommy's mom was always right there keeping a close eye on her young son.

---

But today was different. He watched as Tommy wandered out of the yard and crossed the street to the alley. Mom was nowhere to be seen. He knew this was his chance and snatching an apple from the NO EXIT bowl on the counter, he ran down the stairs to the back of the ally.

“Hi, Tommy. Remember me?”

“Yes.”

“Here, you want this apple?” The NO EXIT little boy took the apple and started to turn NO EXIT away. “Wait, I NO EXIT have toys upstairs. Wouldn’t you like to come up and play?”

“Okay.”

Barney snatched him up and went up the back stairs.

After playing toy soldiers with the kid for an hour, Tommy started to whine and wanted to go home. Barney gave him half a sleeping pill in his milk and Tommy went out like a light. Later that evening he watched as the police combed the neighborhood. They’d be at his door soon. Taking long, slow breaths, he tried to remain calm so he’d appear unworried when they questioned him.

All his effort was in vain. He broke into a sweat and NO EXIT his breathing quickened NO EXIT when the pounding on his door finally came. Jerking off his shirt and grabbing the dumbbells lying against the wall, he opened the door. Two uniformed officers looked him over.

He decided belligerence was the way to go. "What do you want? I'm busy."

Officer Cable's gaze traveled from the fine sheen of sweat covering the man's face and chest to the weights he held. Noticing the guy's increased breathing he shook his head slightly. He'd been on the force for fifteen years and if he didn't know the man had been exercising, he'd swear he was guilty of something.

"I'm officer Cable, this is my partner, Collins. We need your NO EXIT name and where you work."

"Real pleased to meet you. Name's Barney Webber and I work down the street at Mack's Grocery. What do you want?"

Collins wrote on his notepad and Cable held out an eight by ten glossy of Tommy. "You NO EXIT seen this kid?"

“I see the brat every day. He lives right across the street.”

“Have NO EXIT you seen him today? He’s missing.”

“Yeah, I saw him around four o’clock when I got home from work. He was playing out by NO EXIT the street.”

“See anyone else around him?”
