Author's Note:

Dear Ladies and Gents,

There is nothing I love more than reading a romance novel and finding out something new and fun to try out with my husband. After all, the couple that plays together stays together. Before you decide to try out peppermint oil play with your sweetie/subbie, a word of warning:

Peppermint oil can hurt you!

And I don't mean a good hurt. I mean ah 'Oh crap I have to figure out how I'm going to explain to my family Peppermint Passion why I have to get a skin graft on my vagina' hurt you. See, peppermint oil, while fun and arousing when used in moderation, is a chemical and can cause chemical burns. The best way to use peppermint/cinnamon/spearmint oil is in their diluted form and the best way to dilute them is with a water based lubricant, preferably an edible one. Usually the ratio is 1 part peppermint oil to three parts lubricant. Start out with small amounts and work your way up to what you and your partner like.

Doms- this is for you. Before using peppermint oil on your sub, use it on yourself first. While you may not have the same sexual equipment as your partner, you can use other parts of your body to simulate the feeling Peppermint Passion of peppermint oil on the anus, vagina, or glans. Your inner lip, for example, will have similar sensitivity to a vagina. Dilute the peppermint oil and place some on your inner lip and test it before you pour it all over your Peppermint Passion sub. This will educate you on the sensation and not leave you guessing as to what your sub is experiencing.

I hope I didn't scare you away from a little peppermint play. In the right amounts it can provide a mind Peppermint Passion blowing experience for both partners. Enjoy, and remember- Safe, Sane, and Consensual. :)

ChapterOne

The car door next to Shyla opened and a frigid breeze gusted into the toasty warm interior of the Mercedes. She turned her attention to her best friend Opal's husband, Greg, as he held his hand out to help her from the backseat. The faint lines around his dark eyes crinkled when she stared at his hand and his breath misted Peppermint Passion before him. The winters in Michigan were no joke, especially the day before Christmas.

Greg looked over the car as twilight streaked the sky with burning amber and velvety amethyst streaks. "Opal, I think Shyla needs a moment with you before she's ready to go inside."

Shyla mouthed 'thank you' and Greg nodded with a small smile as he shut the door. A moment later the door on the other side of the car opened and Opal slid in with a clink of chain and creak of leather from beneath her jacket. Her auburn curls Peppermint Passion bounced as she shut Peppermint Passion the door and shivered. Around her neck she wore a red leather collar with a little boughs of mistletoe embroidered on it. A gold medallion with Greg's name etched into the metal flashed in the fading light as Opal turned to her. Shyla wore a similar collar, but it hers had red and white stripes like a candy cane and had no owner's charm to catch the light.

Before Shyla could say a word, Opal pinned her to the seat with narrow-eyed glare. “Seriously, you’re gonna chicken out now? When you’re finally single and ready to mingle?” She held Peppermint Passion up her hand, stopping Shyla before she had a chance to say a word in her defense. “All those speeches you gave me about embracing your sexuality and not being ashamed of what you want, how does sitting in the driveway of your boss’ house instead of attending your works Christmas party fit into that plan? What part of cowering alone in the backseat of my car while the men of your dreams are inside says empowering?”

Shyla tried not to squirm Peppermint Passion beneath Opal’s school-teacher stare. “Well—”

“And, I know that I didn’t spend all day last Saturday with you helping you pick out the perfect outfit, going and getting a pedicure, and enduring a cookie waxing with you so you could sit in the car and hide.”

“Uh-no.”

Opal patted her hand and the car shifted slightly as Greg leaned his back against the window. “So what’s the problem?”

Shyla took a deep breath and let it out slowly, practicing the relaxation technique she had learned in yoga. A skill she'd desperately needed when her ex-boyfriend proclaimed her a perverted nymphomaniac and dumped her after he found her carefully hidden collection Peppermint Passion of BDSM erotica and sex toys. "What if someone laughs at me?"

Opal smacked her forehead and leaned in until their noses almost touched. "Look, I realize that even after a year of working as a waitress at the best BDSM club in Detroit you're still new to the scene itself, but even you have to admit that you look like a wet fetish dream." Opal's lips twitched in a suppressed smile, "Or should I say a Dom's wet dream."

A car pulled past them and honked. Outside the window, Greg raised his hand in greeting. A pang of guilt tightened her already knotted stomach. He must be Peppermint Passion freezing his ass off while Peppermint Passion she had her little melt down. "What if they laugh at me?"

"Masters Jack and Trent? Girl, the only reason they haven't jumped you and strung you up by your heels already is because you're an employee and you had a boyfriend. Trust me, those two watch you like starving men looking at a delicious chocolate cake."

Shyla's heart fluttered as a hint of hope filled her. "Really? Are you sure it isn't because I follow them around like a stalker and drool over them like a teenager with a crush?"

Opal giggled and held her hand. “No. When you aren’t staring at them, they’re staring at you. Have you ever noticed how they put on their demonstrations in whatever section you’re serving that night? What about them taking you out to breakfast every night you work? Or how they get a tad bit over-protective of you?”

“They’re protective of everyone that works at the Hall and other Peppermint Passion people from work come with us. It’s not like we’re having a romantic meal, it’s the Pancake Village for Pete’s sake.”

“Yeah, but they tell every Dom that even Peppermint Passion looks your way that you’re hands-off.”

Shyla gaped at her while Greg yelled through the window, “Let’s get a move on ladies! I think my left nut just fell off.”

Both women laughed and Shyla took a deep breath. “Ok, I’ll go in. But Peppermint Passion if they laugh at me, or worse yet ignore me, I expect you to help me get good and drunk.”
