Someone Like You

This book is dedicated to my amazing husband, Elijah Knox, Jr., who has been my best friend since our wedding day March 26, 1986. He was very supportive of my 1st novel Truly Madly Deeply before, during and after the publication. Elijah, you are my soul mate and I will love you for infinity. I also dedicate this to my sister in law Celeste Ann Knox-Smith who was married to my brother Roy Smith. (Yes we were double in-laws) May they both rest in peace as they take care of our daughter, Meghan Khrystyan Knox, my father Bobby Lee Smith, Sr., her mother Louise Knox, her father, Elijah Knox Sr., and all the other love ones not mention. Someone Like You Happy 45th Birthday Celeste October 13, 2012.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to acknowledge the fact that without the Lord, our father and creator, none of this would be possible. I thank him first and foremost for giving me this gift of visionary creativity.

Author Donna Altman of the Within Series continues to be an inspirational mentor for me. Thanks again Donna!!

I have to give a big THANKS to my Guest Editor, Gena Harris, for taking the time to read through my entire novel with me for errors before publication while waiting for Spencer Harris to be born.

And last but certainly not least I can't forget my girls Alexis Someone Like You Bell, Ashley Jury, Betty Munford, Chaura Spears, Dana Hipps, Deanna Booth, Elizabeth Carridine, Kala Hodges, Lennette Hamm, Stacy Barnes, and Tera Thornton. Thanks for reading my drafts

Someone Like You and encouraging me complete this novel as well. It may not be exactly what you originally read but I hope you will still love it as well as my new readers. ENJOY!!

Prologue

5 years ago.....

“Ambi, I do love you and I hope as time goes by that I will eventually fall in love with you. We have a child together that we have to think about. This game playing you are doing is stupid. Daesha has chosen to go on with her life so allow her to as I am.” Tahj stated.

His words shocked Daesha back to reality of the entire situation. She started crying herself and ran out of the bathroom. Tahj ran and caught her. Ambi broke down crying worse when her husband departed leaving her alone in the bathroom.

“Why are you crying? I thought this was what you want.” He said to Daesha.

“A part of me was hoping that you’d see my face and come to the realization that things aren’t really over for me. I wish nothing but the best for you and your newfound family. It has sunk into my head that you are truly married. She has given Someone Like You you a daughter which is something we only talked about. At least you can say Someone Like You that I gave you a rare gift which was Someone Like You my virginity. I don’t want to feel as though I am living on regrets and mistakes so I have decided to leave tonight on the first flight back to Miami. This is torture. Once I am gone we can both go on with our lives.”

“Don’t leave like this.” Tahj stated softly.

“I am tired of the drama. I have to go. I will always love you.” She said without waiting for a response as she ran over to her mother and Aahsod.

Amaia gasped when she saw her daughter’s dishevel look and bruises. “Take me home, please.” Daesha stated through tears. They nodded and excused themselves to escort Daesha out of the church to their vehicle.

They were unable to convince Daesha to stay the remainder of the summer. Her mother cried as she helped her pack for her flight. Once Someone Like You they were at the airport, Daesha spoke.

“Mom, I know you and Aahsod have Someone Like You always felt that love conquers all when it is truly, madly, and deeply. Just realize that it doesn’t happen for everyone. I am glad that it did happen for the two of you. I realize now Someone Like You that Tahj and I just were not destined to love one Someone Like You another. Sometimes people get together and their love last but sometimes love hurts. I want to move forward with my life. I finally see how much Aahsod loves you. So, Aahsod, I truly hope Someone Like You that someday I can find someone like you. My roommate from college has her own apartment now and offered me a chance to stay with her over the summer if needed. It will keep my mind off of this drama. I don’t know when I will get over this enough to visit home again. Just please understand what I am going through and respect my decision.”
