The Choice: Part One

By W.P. Atwood

I want to dedicate this book to my nesting baby. Without these vividly, weird pregnancy dreams, I wouldn't have known where to start. Thank you so much ma petite bebe. Mommy loves you.

This is what I hate about camping... there's no indoor plumbing! Do you know how hard it is for a seven month pregnant woman to pee outside? Near impossible. First off, you already don't have any balance because you're growing straight out and then to top it off, you can't see what you're doing with the stinking toilet paper. I love my family, but the hubby and I really should've skipped this family tradition this summer.

'SNAP!'

I tense up, even more than I already am trying to stay in a squatting position, at the sound of a twig breaking off to The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) my left. I hold my urine in for a minute to listen more closely to the woods around me, which really isn't too difficult because I have super sensitive hearing for a human. Nothing. I let out the breath I've been holding and let go, it feels so nice to relieve my bladder. The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) I'm just pushing up into more of a sitting position to clean myself up when I catch movement out of the corner of my eye, looked like a dark The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) streak of something, but it's gone when I look to where I thought The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) I saw it. I shake my head, thinking maybe the pregnancy hormones are getting to me again. I brace my weight on my knees so I can reach back and wipe myself up when I see movement again, this time straight ahead of me. I rush to clean up and just get my underwear pulled up around my hips and start reaching for my pants when I hear a low growl ahead of me. The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) When I look up, I meet the eyes of the most beautiful black wolf I've ever seen. Its coat shining like midnight, jet black with blue tints and its eyes the most amazing color of aqua blue staring right back at me. I know this is going to sound strange, but I don't freeze up at the sight of this oversized wolf and now that I'm paying closer attention, I mean really oversized, as in it comes up to my chest big. I let out a huge sigh and just sit and enjoy the moment this creature is allowing me by letting me be this close and gaze upon its magnificence.

"Why are you not afraid of me?" I hear a strange voice say in my head. Very deep, rugged and extremely male.

"Oh you've really lost your marbles now Addi. Thinking you're hearing voices is a stretch even for a severely pregnant lady." I mumble to myself.

"Wait. You can actually hear me? Look at me, I am the wolf!" the masculine The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) voice shouts.

"Um, I don't think I'm qualified for this. I can't talk to wild creatures and I sure as heck can't hear this wolf's voice inside my head. Can I?" I whisper and look up. The black wolf is sitting stoically in front of me, just watching me with its aqua eyes. I can't decide if I should be weirded out or flattered at the attention. I settle for very embarrassed when I realize my pants are still down around my thighs. I bend over and quickly pull them up my legs and fasten them up under my enormous mom-to-be belly. I'm sure my face is ten shades of blush right now, but all I see is calm in the wolf's posture. It could just be my imagination, but I swear I saw a flash of desire and then amusement in that gaze of his. Tricky wolf.

"My name is Noah. I am an alpha male in the Lykos clan and you are in The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) my territory. What is your purpose here?" The black wolf asks.

"Annual family camping trip. We usually stay lower down the mountain, but my The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) mom and dad really wanted to experience more of the wildlife this year. Is that a problem?" I'm getting mildly annoyed that this animal thinks he can dictate where people camp. He doesn't own the stinking forest. At the end of my rant the The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) wolf, Noah, flashes some serious fang at me which I interpret as a smirk or a smile. I don't know which for sure because I can't The Choice: Part One (Fated Mates) tell if he's happy or upset.
