
Edmond Dantes

Edmond Dantes was a young Frenchman who worked on a ship called the Pharoah in The Count of Monte Cristo (Young Learners Classic Readers Book 60).

In 1815, the ship sailed into Marseilles. The captain, Captain Leclerc, had died during the voyage. Mr. Morrel, the owner of the ship, thought about making Edmond Dantes his new captain.

Danglars, another man on the ship, wanted to be the captain. He went to see the owner.

“Good day, Mr. Morrel,” said Danglars. “Did you hear the sad news? Leclerc was a great captain.”

“Yes,” Morrel said. “But look at Edmond Dantes in The Count of Monte Cristo (Young Learners Classic Readers Book 60). He works well, too.”

Danglars said, “But when Captain Leclerc died, we wasted time at the island of Elba. Dantes ordered us to stay there. It was like a holiday!”

Later, Morrel asked Dantes why he stopped at Elba.

“I was following Captain Leclerc’s last order,” Dantes in The Count of Monte Cristo (Young Learners Classic Readers Book 60) answered. “I had to deliver a letter for Marshal Bertrand.”

Morrel moved close to Dantes. “Did you speak to Napoleon?” he whispered.

“Yes,” Dantes said. “He asked me some questions. And he said he knew the Morrel family.”

from the army.”

“Napoleon knew my uncle,” the ship owner said. The Count of Monte Cristo (Young Learners Classic Readers Book 60) “My uncle will be happy to hear that Napoleon remembers him! Dantes, don’t tell anyone about the letter or Napoleon. You will get into trouble.”

Dantes said he would keep his meeting with Napoleon a secret. Then he asked to leave the ship for two weeks to marry his fiancée, Mercedes.

Morrel agreed. He also told Dantes, “I want to make you the new captain of the Pharaoh.”

Feeling very happy, Dantes left to visit his father and Mercedes.

When Dantes arrived at his father’s house, he noticed that his father was not well. Then Dantes saw that his father had nothing to eat or drink in his house.

“But I The Count of Monte Cristo (Young Learners Classic Readers Book 60) gave you lots of money before I left,” Dantes said.

“Yes,” his father said. “But I The Count of Monte Cristo (Young Learners Classic Readers Book 60) spent most of it helping my friend, Caderousse.”

“Take this money and get some food,” Dantes said. He placed some money on the table.

“Oh, here comes Caderousse now,” Dantes’s father said.

“Hello, Edmond,” Caderousse said. His mouth was smiling, but his eyes were not.

“Hello,” said Dantes smiling back.

Caderousse looked at the money on the table. Then he said, “Danglars just told me you were here. But he didn’t tell me you had become rich. Do you think Morrel will name you captain?”

“Yes, I believe he will. I’m afraid I must leave you now to visit Mercedes.”

Caderousse also left. He went to meet Danglars. Caderousse told Danglars all that Edmond Dantes had said.
