Tonga Braakl floated over the top of a cloud looking out to the stars. He loved looking at the stars. The Old Ones told him that The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) they were full of nothing but danger, that was why they had come here to their new home world of Kibbuiz, to be safe, secure and hidden.

The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles)

The Pyntaxian's were an ancient people, older than Tonga Braakl cared to imagine, the Old Ones reminded them in their songs of their long and beautiful history. Tonga Braakl did not care. He was one of the generation who had never known the horrors that lay between the skies. Born The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) and raised within Kibbuiz he had never known The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) the physical realm, just the wonder of the energy of the Kibbuiz wind pushing his being through the cinnamon and cream clouds of his beautiful home world. A The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) being of nothing more than energy, light and alive. Tonga Braakl loved his world, the gas giant of Kibbuiz was nothing but safe and welcoming to him, but the stars, full of danger and majesty, were full of allure.

“What are you thinking?” Asked a familiar voice.

Tonga Braakl turned to see his best friend. Neta Thrysh's golden hue flew up beside him.

“Just imagining what lies up there.” He indicated to the stars above them. “Do you think Thotos Phlay is right and we did come from the stars?”

“He's hardly the only one of the Old Ones to say that. Nitja Bree says we fled here to escape the Walking Death.” Replied Neta Thrysh as she flew alongside him and turned to look up at the twinkling points of light overhead.

“That is a silly children's tale.” Scoffed Tonga Braakl.

“If you say so... you are older than me after all!” She teased.

Tonga Braakl laughed, the melody of it booming around the thunderhead they were flying above. It was true, he was older than Neta Thrysh, but only by a few days. Old Ones like Nitja Bree and Thotos Phlay were hundreds of thousands of years old and easily the size of the cloud they were flying above.

Suddenly the booming of his laughter was replaced by the dangerous booming of nearby thunder. Tonga Braakl shivered as he always did, his golden hue quivering as the thunder shockwave rippled over them.

Neta Thrysh giggled. "Coward!"

"I'm not!" The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) He The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) responded, a bit too harshly. "I just don't like it... that's all."

But hidden behind the rolls of thunder was a second sound, more melodic and beautiful. Beyond the shrouded wonder of the lower cloud layers came the deep bellow of the song of an Old One.

Their eyes flashing golden-red they both looked at each other happily, the electric boundaries of their being rippling with excitement. Whenever an The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) Old One started The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) singing they learned something, their operatic wails could last for days and days, Thotos Phlay had once sung for more The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) than a Kibbuiz year, and had told them of their ancient home world, from when Pyntaxian's had been physical beings with bodies. Tonga Braakl had been born long after the Great Change The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) that had seen Pyntaxian's evolve beyond their bodies and into the beautiful, graceful energy beings they lived as today. Other times they had told of how the ancient Pyntaxian's had mentored young races only beginning to show signs of sentience, hidden them from danger and watching over their development. Other times they had sung of the Great Change, or the Walking Death and other legends, or the space ships they had once built, or what child birth in a physical body was like, or eating food... Tonga Braakl devoured them all, whilst Neta Thrysh tended to ignore them, the past as boring according to her. She was more interested in seeing how fast she could fly, how deep into the atmosphere the sunlight went, and wondering what it would be like to live a million years to be even older The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) than the oldest of the Old Ones.

They dove off the side of the cloud and plunged deep into the atmosphere of Kibbuiz. Under the shadows of the thunderheads lay thin and wispy white clouds. Tonga Braakl The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) luxuriated in the way The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) they felt against the edges of his being, the way they crackled and buzzed as the energy built up and then flew off him. Neta Thrysh giggled next to The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) him as she experienced the same.

“There!” He called out to her, seeing the behemoth up ahead. “You see her?”

Neta Thrysh nodded and they dove down another cloud layer to the enormous Old One whose voice was vibrating the atmosphere all around.

“Oh my... It’s Nitja Bree!” Gaspd Neta Thrysh.

Their joy widened. Nitja Bree was so old she had seen grandchildren born to physical bodies, then transcended to become pure energy. She had survived the Great Change and the escape from the Walking Dead to Kibbuiz and The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) lived long enough to be named an Honoured Elder. Even now the faint glow of her body, warm like the morning sun, was still The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) strong, not withering or The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) decaying. She could live another eon at least. Every time she sung the younger Pyntaxian’s learned something new that the Old Ones had forgotten about their long forgotten culture, their songs were The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) as educating as they were beautiful.

Tonga Braakl closed his eyes as let the soft wails and vibrations lap over him. He felt the wind and let it replenish the energy it had taken to fly down to this level, he always found it harder swimming at the lower cloud level where the Old Ones The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) remained. Darker and thicker clouds, he imagined it reminded them of what it was like to have bodies with mass and volume, with the strange appendages they had spoken of, “arms” and “legs,” the very The Transcendent Ones (The Seraphic Chronicles) idea was such an alien concept. All a real Pyntaxian needed was a head, tail and wings, and the rich pleasure of a firm wind to replenish your energy levels. But, despite the gloomier state of the sky from down here, Tonga Braakl relaxed into the song, when life was as tranquil and peaceful as this, the Old Ones could keep their misery, Tonga Braakl thought the past sounded exciting. Aliens. Bodies. Adventures.

He would give a year on a cloud to experience that himself. He told Neta Thrysh so too.
