
October 27, 2005, the Independent Inquiry Committee into The United Nations Oil for Food Programme, issued its final report. The huge (630 pages) report was sub-titled, "Manipulation Of The Oil-For-Food Programme By The Iraqi Regime Oil Transactions and Treachery In Turtle Bay Illicit Payments; Humanitarian Goods Transactions and Illicit Payments; The Escrow Bank and the Inspection Companies; Other UN-Related Issues."

Most people, both in and out of the United Nations, never got past the first sentence in the second paragraph of the summary. It reads, "Under the Programme, the Government of Iraq sold $64.2 billion of oil to 248 companies. In turn, 3,614 companies sold $34.5 billion of humanitarian goods to Iraq."

The difference between the income from oil sales and the outgo to buy humanitarian goods was 29.7 Billion Dollars.

What happened to that $29,700,000,000?

Turtle Bay

Turtle Bay is a neighborhood in New York Treachery In Turtle Bay City, on the east Treachery In Turtle Bay side of Midtown Manhattan. It extends between 42nd and 53rd Streets and eastward from Lexington Avenue to the East River, across from Roosevelt Island. It was named after an actual bay that was filled in and is now the site of the United Nations Headquarters.

Chapter One

“You can’t go out that way this morning, Mr. Masterson.”

This surprise restriction came from Mike, one of the security guys who protected the inhabitants of my apartment building on East 46th Treachery In Turtle Bay Street in New York City, about half a city block from the headquarters building of the Treachery In Turtle Bay United Nations.

I was about to take the shortcut to my Treachery In Turtle Bay office, in the fifteen-floor building owned by the Government of Uganda and housing the Ugandan Mission to the United Nations. My small contingent of consultants was occupying two floors in the building while we restructured the operations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund over the preceding four plus years.

The service entrance to my building opened into a small park surrounded on three sides by high-rise apartments and East 45th street on the fourth side. My office was literally Treachery In Turtle Bay across the street.

“Why Mike, some group demonstrating?” I retorted. The area was constantly in turmoil being the assembly point of every group in the world with a gripe.

“You might say that Mr. M, some guy jumped out of the 20th floor of the building next door, wow, that’s almost in line with your windows. I guess you didn’t see anything?”

I made the mistake of looking past Mike, through the open door and into the park.

Apparently, the cleanup had not yet been completed, or possibly not yet begun. I could see the body bag on the ground next to one Treachery In Turtle Bay of the benches, but there were still small pools of blood on and around the bench. I saw small clumps of what possibly were pieces of his brain or some other body parts. I concluded this because they were circled in yellow chalk marks on the stone surface of the park.

More to clear my brain of the vision, I looked up to the trees in the park only to see what looked like a light colored silken robe. It was ripped but much of it had stuck in the branches of the fifty-foot trees that were Treachery In Turtle Bay all over the small park.

Now who the hell puts on a silk robe to jump out the twentieth story window of their apartment?
