What is career contentment?

Jeff Garton (Garton)

First of all, contentment is a human emotion. Like any emotion, it is the direct result of how you think. You think first, feel second (emotion), and then you take action based on how you feel.

You act on Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness your emotions because of what you think or as the result of how you are caused to think. This is a fact Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness that leaders, teachers, coaches, and salespeople rely on to motivate human behavior.

You can motivate yourself (self-motivation) in this same manner—by Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness simply improving how you think in a non-negative manner. This is what positive psychologists refer to as thinking realistically and optimistically.

You want to do something, for example, because you thought about it first. What gets you up and moving is how you feel. You can improve how you feel and the effectiveness of how well you perform by simply improving how you think.

* If you think you can do something, you inspire performance enhancing emotions to act upon: joy, optimism, excitement, enthusiasm, gratitude, and contentment. This creates Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness an ease response, thus improving your chances of accomplishing what you want. At the same time, you create favorable impressions: you're perceived as joyful, optimistic, excited, enthused, grateful, and content.

* If you think you can't do something (or you waste your time complaining), Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness you inspire performance inhibiting emotions to act upon: fear, worry, envy, doubt and anger. This creates a strain response, thus decreasing your performance potential. You procrastinate, do the wrong thing, or you Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness deliver half-hearted efforts. At the same time, you create unfavorable impressions: you're perceived to be a poor performer, afraid, worried, envious, uncertain and upset.

Because your life circumstances and work conditions are never consistently satisfying, the idea is to learn how to think non-negatively (realistically and optimistically) so as to maintain your own good performance despite your Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness circumstances. You think or reason to recognize the agreeable middle ground between the extremes of satisfaction or dissatisfaction. By taking the approach of intentionally recognizing your contentment, you create an ease response to act upon that improves your own performance and perceptions about you.

Is this Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness possible? It's a scientific fact! Your circumstances are random and meaningless until you assign them a meaning and react. You assign the meanings, which makes you responsible for how you feel, what you do, and how others react toward you. Your circumstances, therefore, are secondary or subject to your thoughts about them. In other words, you don't live in response to your circumstances, but in response to your emotions caused by what you think about your circumstances. This means that you have the power to create your Yes You Can!: Reaching

Your Potential While Achieving Greatness own heaven or hell on Earth by how you choose to think.

Not only do you have the freedom to think whatever you choose, Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness you also have the freedom to create any emotion you prefer to act upon, regardless of whatever your external circumstances or conditions might be.

- You can think to feel confident, and therefore act confidently, even though your external Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness conditions may be frightening. For Yes You Can!: Reaching Your Potential While Achieving Greatness example, when you have to give a presentation or perform a challenging task.
